The Annunciation and the Beginning of Human Life

The Feast of the Annunciation celebrates the moment when the Angel Gabriel appeared to the Virgin Mary and announced that she would conceive and bear the Son of God. Mary's humble response, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it done unto me according to thy word" (Luke 1:38), marks the moment when the Word became flesh.

What is important is when this happened. It did not occur nine months later at Christmas. It occurred at the moment Mary conceived by the power of the Holy Spirit. The Church therefore celebrates the Annunciation exactly nine months before Christmas, because the Incarnation began at conception.

This feast gives us one of the clearest confirmations in the Christian faith that human life begins at conception.

At the instant Mary said "yes" to God, Jesus Christ was truly present in her womb. He was not a potential person who would later become human. He was already the Son of God made man, though hidden in the smallest and most fragile stage of human life. From that first moment of conception, the humanity of Christ was real and complete.

This truth helps us understand the dignity of every human life. Modern science confirms that from the moment of fertilization a new human life begins. The embryo has its own genetic identity, distinct from the mother and the father, and develops continuously from that first moment. The Church therefore teaches that the human embryo must be respected and treated as a person from the moment of conception, because that is when a new human life begins.

Philosophically and theologically, the human person is a unity of body and soul. The soul is the principle of life that makes the body a living human body. As soon as a human life exists, there must also be a human soul. There cannot be a living human body without a soul that gives it life. For this reason the Church rejects the idea that there could be a "pre-ensouled" human being who later becomes a person. If a human life exists, it is already a human person.

Pope St John Paul II explained this clearly in Evangelium Vitae: from the moment the ovum is fertilized, a new life begins which is neither that of the father nor the mother, but a new human being with his own development.

The Annunciation reminds us that this truth is not merely a philosophical argument but a mystery of salvation. The Son of God chose to become man not at birth, but at conception. God Himself entered human history in the hidden form of an unborn child.

For this reason the Church defends the unborn so strongly. The womb should be the safest place in the world, a sanctuary of life. Every child conceived shares the same dignity that Christ assumed in the womb of Mary.

Therefore the Annunciation calls us to reverence the beginning of life. Just as Mary welcomed the life of Christ with faith and love, we too are called to protect and defend every human life from its very first moment.
